RE: RESOLUTIONS AND ORDINANCE REGARDING THE EXECUTION BY THE CITY OF INTEREST RATE SWAPS IN CONNECTION WITH THE ISSUANCE BY THE OAKLAND JOINT POWERS FINANCING AUTHORITY OF LEASE REVENUE BONDS (OAKLAND ADMINISTRATION BUILDINGS) AND APPROVAL OF RELATED DOCUMENTS

SUMMARY

In March 1996, the Oakland Joint Powers Financing Authority (the "Authority") issued its Lease Revenue Bonds (Oakland Administration Buildings) Series 1996 (the "Bonds") in the amount of $103,945,000 to finance the design, construction, rehabilitation, and equipping of two buildings which are part of the administrative center of the City of Oakland (the "City"). The debt service on the Bonds is paid from lease payments paid by the City from the General Fund. As background, the City and the Redevelopment Agency of the City of Oakland ("Agency") executed a Joint Exercise of Powers Agreement, dated as of February 1, 1993 ("Joint Powers Agreement"), by and between the City and the Agency, which Joint Powers Agreement creates and establishes the Authority.

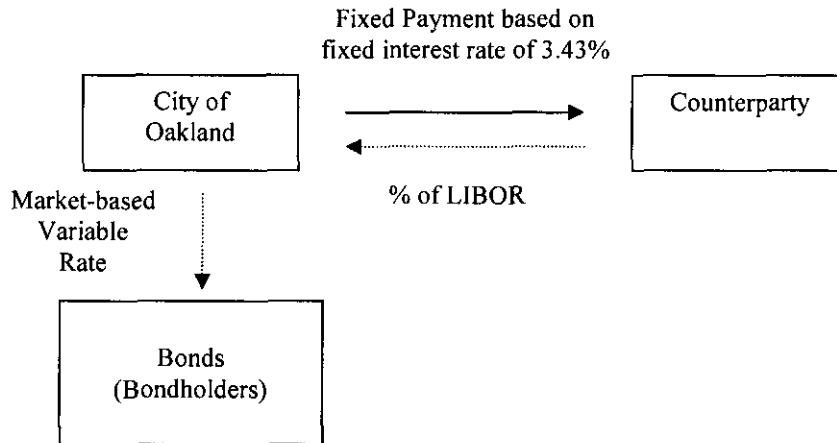

The debt payments for the Bonds were structured so that annual payments would be level and fixed, at an overall interest rate of approximately 6.00%. The structure is diagrammed below:

The Finance and Management Agency has solicited proposals from investment banking firms to examine ways to restructure the Bonds so as to generate savings to the City. The resulting proposals have shown that the City could obtain significant savings by using a synthetic interest rate "swap" structure.

An interest rate swap is a contractual agreement between two parties (e.g. City of Oakland and a Counterparty, such as an investment bank) in which one set of cash flows is exchanged or "swapped" for another set during an agreed-upon period of time. The Finance and Management Agency is proposing an interest rate swap that provides the City with the least amount of risk while giving the greatest amount of savings. The current Bonds would be paid off and new bonds would be issued as part of the new structure.

Under the new structure, the City will agree to make a fixed rate payment to the Counterparty equal to approximately a 3.43% interest rate on the Bonds. This drop in interest rates reflects the decline in interest rates since the issuance of the Bonds in 1996. The City would then receive from the Counterparty variable rate payments that are equal to a specific percentage of the 1-month London Interbank Offer Rate (LIBOR). The City would then be obligated to make variable rate interest payments to the holders of the Bonds based upon the tax-exempt capital markets. The structure is diagrammed below:

As described above, the new transaction will be structured so that the overall debt service on this transaction will be the same as what the City is currently paying (approximately $7.5M annually). Maintaining the same debt service dollar amount at a lower net interest rate will allow the new transaction to generate an up-front lump-sum payment in the amount of approximately $8.5 million or 8.8% net present value savings.

FISCAL IMPACTS

The savings to the City from executing the proposed swap transaction will amount to approximately $8.5 million, which can be realized by receiving the entire savings upfront. The reason for the savings is that the current interest rate environment is lower than when the original Bonds were issued. The debt service the City is currently paying is not expected to change. The swap will be structured so that after the City refunds its outstanding fixed rate Bonds with variable rate bonds and receives the projected upfront savings, its overall projected debt service will equal the debt service obligations of the original fixed rate Bonds.

The Counterparty, normally an investment banking firm, recoups its fees for arranging and carrying out the swap from the fixed rate to be received from the City. Although an interest rate swap is a contractual obligation, it is not considered a debt of the City.

BACKGROUND

In an effort to examine ways in which to restructure the Oakland Joint Powers Financing Authority Lease Revenue Bonds (Oakland Administration Buildings) Series 1996 that would generate significant savings to the City, a Request for Qualifications was sent to nine investment banking firms with the experience, capability and capital necessary to implement complicated transactions involving synthetic refunding transactions or interest rate swaps. UBS Financial Services, Inc. and Banc of America Securities LLC were selected by the Finance and Management Agency based upon the firms experience, capability, capital and restructuring ideas.

KEY ISSUES AND IMPACTS

Why use a Swap?

The Finance and Management Agency examined various options which can be used to refund the outstanding 1996 Bonds. A traditional type of refunding of the 1996 Bonds is called an advanced refunding. This technique would allow the City to execute a refunding today even though the refunding would not become fully operative until a future date. The net proceeds of the refunding issue, together with interest earnings, must be at least sufficient to meet debt service on the outstanding bonds through the first date the bondholders have agreed to have their bonds paid off.

However, this refunding technique would only yield an estimated $2.4 million in savings or a net present value savings of 2.41%. This is due to the current low interest rate environment that requires more net proceeds to meet the debt service of the outstanding bonds through the first call date. The proposed transaction, a refunding utilizing a swap, will generate approximately $8.5 million in present value savings.

Purpose of the Swap Transaction

The Finance and Management Agency has found that restructuring the Bonds by using an interest rate swap can yield significant savings to the City. The implementation of a swap will also allow the City to take advantage of lower interest rates. The savings from the swap can be obtained upfront to the City and are estimated to be $8.5 million. Furthermore, the City will have the ability to terminate the swap for a gain under certain interest rate environments. Finally, the City can customize the swap transaction by balancing the amount of risk to the City with the amount of savings that can be taken. The customization can be achieved through its selection of the actual percentage rate of LIBOR the City will be receiving from the Counterparty.

Use of Savings

The additional money generated as a result of the refunding must be used for public capital improvement projects. Generally, federal tax law pertaining to tax-exempt bonds provides that such money must be spent on the acquisition or construction of public capital improvements within three years from the date of issuance of the bonds. Public capital improvements mean assets or improvements that are owned by the City and used by the City or the general public. Examples of public capital improvements are: street and sidewalk projects; public park acquisition and/or improvements; governmental building acquisition and/or improvement; library and/or museum improvement programs, etc.

It is recommended that the savings generated from the transaction be deposited into the Capital Improvements Reserve Fund. The Capital Improvements Reserve Fund was established June 2003. The monies from this fund may be appropriated only to fund major capital maintenance or repair costs to City owned facilities and unappropriated capital improvement projects that are not included in the annual operating budget or the City's Capital Improvement Program. Pursuant to the language creating this fund, unless otherwise directed by Council, revenues received from one-time activities, including the sale of real property, may be deposited into the Capital Improvements Reserve Fund. City Council must approve any use of monies from this fund.

Interest Rate Risk

The impact of entering into an interest rate swap-based structure depends largely on how interest rates behave in the future. If the City were to receive 65% of LIBOR and pay variable rate interest payments to the Bondholders, the total interest rate the City would pay would be the fixed rate of 3.43% plus the difference between 65% of LIBOR and the variable interest rate paid to the bondholders. The City essentially assumes the risk of any mismatch (whether shortfall or excess) between 65% of LIBOR and the variable interest rate it will pay its Bondholders. This risk can be quantified by examining the historical relationship between the variable interest rate index paid to the Bondholders of the Bonds and LIBOR, or a ratio defined here as Variable Interest Rate/LIBOR. For the past ten years, this ratio has averaged 63.5%. Attached as attachment A is a historical chart of the averages of the variable interest rates and of LIBOR. Attachments B and C are also provided to show a history of both rates.

Counterparty Risk

Counterparty risk is the risk that the swap Counterparty (an investment banking firm selected by the City) will be unable to meet its obligations as specified under the contract. Counterparty risk can be mitigated by selecting a Counterparty with a high rating from the rating agencies of Moody's or Standard & Poors. Generally speaking, most Counterparties are rated Aa/AA or higher. The risk to the City is the need to obtain a replacement swap provider should it default.

Other Risk Factors

LIBOR-based indices are taxable products. Factors that influence LIBOR-based indices or the taxable market in general are tax reform risk or adjustments to the federal income tax codes. Possible tax reform risk such as tax relief legislation that would permanently lower the highest marginal tax rate to 35% would place more volatility into LIBOR-based indices. However, since taxable interest rates are at an all-time low, the possibility of tax reform should have relatively little effect.

Rating Agency Comments on Swaps

One of the rating agencies, Moody's, has issued an opinion on the use of interest rate swaps. In general, Moody's believes that the prudent use of derivatives – including interest rate swaps – can be an effective tool in meeting funding needs and managing an issuer's budget while limiting risk. Moody's goes on to state that, in general, swap transactions in and of themselves are unlikely to either have a material impact on the credit strength of the issuer or to result in a rating change. Rather, the swap transaction, with its underlying economic fundamentals and the credit implications on the issuer, is examined to determine both the materiality to and the impact on the issuer's financial strength.

SUSTAINABLE OPPORTUNITIES

Economic: The interest rate swap will result in significant savings in the form of an upfront payment to the City.

Environmental: There are no environmental opportunities associated with the interest rate swap transaction.

Social Equity: Since the interest rate swap will result in significant savings in the form of an upfront payment to the City, more monies will be available for services to disadvantaged areas, or enhanced recreational or social venues.

DISABILITY AND SENIOR CITIZEN ACCESS

There is no impact to disability or senior citizen access following actions under this report.

RECOMMENDATIONS AND RATIONALE

Staff recommends that the City approve a resolution and ordinance authorizing staff to begin work on executing the interest rate swap. This action will allow material savings and benefits to occur for the City, by producing present value savings that will be realized upfront. It is anticipated that the interest rate swap will provide proceeds available for capital improvement projects in the City. Staff also recommends that the City engage the following financing team members to complete the transaction: Public Financial Management, Inc. as Financial Advisor; and UBS Financial Services and Banc of America Securities as the Counterparties for the swap and as auction rate securities broker-dealer for the variable rate bonds.

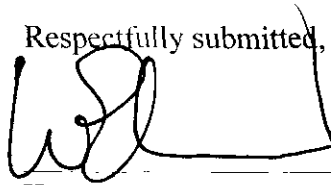

All documents relating to this financing are on file with the City Clerk's Office.

It is expected that the transaction will close in June 2004.

ACTION REQUESTED OF THE CITY COUNCIL

In order to proceed with the interest rate swap, Council will need to approve the resolution and ordinance to authorize the interest rate swap. Also, it is requested that Council approve the appointment of the financing team members and to allow staff to negotiate directly with the two Counterparties for the interest rate swap.
