11 DEC -1 PM 4:16

First elected to the Oakland City Council in 1992, Ignacio served as the chair of the Council's Economic and Community Development Committee until January 1999. At that time, Oakland adopted the Strong-Mayor form of government that separated the Mayor from the City Council and created the position of Council President. Ignacio became the first Council member to be elected by his peers to serve as President of the Oakland City Council from 1999 to 2007. Mr. De La Fuente currently chairs the City's Finance and Management Committee and co-chairs the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum Joint Powers Authority, overseeing the City's Coliseum-Arena complex and three professional sports franchises.

He is credited with the revitalization of Fruitvale's International Boulevard shopping area -- taking its vacancy rate from 40% to nearly 0% -- as well as adding major developments like the Fruitvale Station Shopping Center, Super K-Mart (now Home Depot) and the Fruitvale Transit Village. He is also credited with leading efforts to build two new public schools and ball fields where a large, abandoned building once stood in the Fruitvale. Ignacio's beautification efforts in Glenview have resulted in the complete rehabilitation of the Park Boulevard Median Strip, street banners, new street trees and new community policing initiatives.

He has led innovative crime reduction efforts, including creating the Public Nuisance Case Manager position to go after problem properties, and the Nuisance Eviction Ordinance to allow the city to evict drug dealers from problem properties.
