BARGAINING RIGHTS

WHEREAS, all workers should have the right to bargain collectively to ensure they have a voice on the job and can work to improve their lives and provide for their families; and

WHEREAS, collective bargaining has a long tradition of bringing workers and management together to resolve problems peacefully and avert labor disputes; and

WHEREAS, both private and public sector workers have benefited from the hard-fought gains of the labor movement, including the eight hour day, the weekend to rest, the lunch break, child labor laws and health and safety protection; and

WHEREAS, labor unions helped build the middle class in this country and continue to lead in the fight to keep and create good jobs; and

WHEREAS, the right to organize is essential to a democracy; and

WHEREAS, legislation has been introduced in several states to strip workers of the right to organize; and

WHEREAS, Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker is attacking the rights of public workers and teachers to engage in collective bargaining, while other states are trying to attack the rights of construction workers and to weaken unions by banning the union shop; and
