WHEREAS, she assisted in the re-opening of Chelton Road after the devastating rains and mud slides in the 1960s, and led appeals before the City Council and the Planning Commission on many zoning matters to preserve the quality of life in the Oakland Hills area, and

WHEREAS, she has been active in many volunteer efforts, including serving as a leader of the Oakland Youth Group at St. Paul Lutheran Church, past chair of Children's Hospital Redwood Chapter, fund raiser and recruiter for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation, founder of Partner in Caring (PICS) thrift shop supporting the Salem Retirement Home, former Cub Scout and Boy Scout leader, past-president and continuing member since the 1940s of the Hillside Garden Club, member of Oakland Potluck where she picked up food from grocery stores in her car and delivered it to various relief agencies in Oakland, and most recently, helped in the efforts to preserve Beaconsfield Canyon as open space, and

WHEREAS, she has received a number of accolades and commendations over the years from the City of Oakland in recognition of her outstanding community efforts; including a 1980 award recognizing her 40 years of dedicated service and valuation contributions to the City of Oakland; a 1988 award for her valuable contributions of time and service to the community and a 1990 award from the Office of Parks & Recreation for her devotion and dedication to Parks and Recreation as a Community Service Honoree, and a 2004 Certificate of Appreciation from the Public Works Agency for her years of service to the Keep Oakland Beautiful Adopt-a-spot program, and

WHEREAS, the spot that she adopted—the 2-acre Sulphur Springs Park at the intersection of Ascot and Chelton in the Montclair hills—was renamed Marj Saunders Park in 2004 in recognition of her long-time efforts to preserve the beauty of the Oakland hills, now therefore,
